MONTHLY COMMENTARY

Our fund benchmark, the FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed Net Rental Index, recorded a net total USD return of -3.10% in October. The best performing listed real estate market was Japan, which recorded a total USD return of -1.30%. Hong Kong recorded the lowest total USD return for the month of -8.26%.

Recent global headlines have again raised concerns over the state of troubled department stores as the month saw Sears Holdings file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in the U.S., while Debenhams reported intentions to close a third of their stores in the U.K. We therefore thought it would be interesting to look further into the department store model, the impact of these brick-and-mortar closures on the listed real estate landlords and some of the likely differences across geographies.

The struggling department store is by no means a new concept. Traditional department stores have been losing market share to other retailers and retail channels for some years now, including discount/off-price retailers; mass merchants such as Walmart, and of course to e-commerce. However, department stores have generally been slow to adopt online channels, invest the capital expenditure required into their stores, or have been hesitant to reduce their footprint via store closures.

The impact of an anchor closing on a shopping centre or mall will vary depending on a few factors, including but not limited to 1.) How the anchor drives traffic to the overall centre; 2.) How the closing of the anchor will impact the leasing of the surrounding line-shops (who generally pay significantly higher rents per square foot); 3.) If there are any co-tenancy lease provisions (that allow tenants to terminate their leases or pay less rent should an anchor vacate the centre); 4.) How the anchor impacts the financing of the centre since anchor stability is a primary determinant of mall financing; and 5.) The size of the anchor and vacant space required to be let.

There is likely too much department store space across the globe and the space required from these retailers will shrink over time. The magnitude and rate of closures will impact short term fundamentals as landlords deal with the vacancies and re-tenanting the space. Our thesis is that better quality retail locations and management teams will fare best, with poorer quality retail destinations ultimately becoming irrelevant over time as ecommerce continues to capture market share. Based on current fundamentals we prefer high-quality landlords in the U.S. versus the U.K.

Global real estate fundamentals overall remain healthy, mainly due to manageable supply levels relative to demand, with an improved economic growth outlook. Taking the estimated forward FAD (Funds Available for Distribution) yield of 5.01%, and medium-term growth prospects into account, listed real estate currently looks fairly valued on a risk-adjusted basis.

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

This specialist fund offers real estate focus, with global diversification. The real estate focus is through real estate securities with a specific bias towards stocks classified as investors, as opposed to developers. The investor classification is defined as those stocks that have 70% or more of their income derived from rent. The guiding principle is the ownership of real estate assets, primarily to earn rental related income streams which provide a stable underpin to long term returns. Global diversification is across geographic regions, currencies, countries and real estate types. The intention is to provide an attractive risk-adjusted return to form part of a multi asset class portfolio. The fund benchmark is the FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed Rental Index, which comprises of stocks in the following regions: United States, Canada, UK, Europe, Japan, Hong Kong, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand.

SPECIFIC FUND RISK

Foreign Investment risk:	Foreign securities investments may be subject to risks pertaining to overseas jurisdictions and markets, including (but not limited to) local liquidity, macroeconomic, political, tax, settlement risks and currency fluctuations.
Property risk:	Investments in real estate securities can carry the same risks as investing directly in real estate itself. Real estate prices move in response to a variety of factors, including local, regional and national economic and political conditions, interest rates and tax considerations.
Currency exchange risk:	Changes in the relative values of individual currencies may adversely affect the value of investments and any related income.
Geographic / Sector risk:	For investments primarily concentrated in specific countries, geographical regions and/or industry sectors, their resulting value may decrease whilst portfolios more broadly invested might grow.
Equity investment risk:	Value of equities (e.g. shares) and equity-related investments may vary according to company profits and future prospects as well as more general market factors. In the event of a company default (e.g. bankruptcy), the owners of their equity rank last in terms of any financial payment from that company.
