MONTHLY COMMENTARY

The Catalyst Global Real Estate UCITS Fund (the "Fund") returned 3.57% in USD while the FTSE EPRA NAREIT Developed Rental Index (the "Benchmark") returned 2.43%, resulting in an out-performance of 1.14% for the quarter. During the nine months ended 30 September 2020, the Fund returned -11.05% while the Benchmark returned -19.46%, resulting in an outperformance of 8.41%. The strongest performing region this quarter was Continental Europe, which albeit not immune to the pandemic and its economic consequences, on the whole has remained resilient relative to other global developed economies. Hong Kong continued to underperform as tensions with Beijing remain heightened given that the newly imposed national security law threatens to undermine Hong Kong's autonomy and its appeal as a financial hub and risks of capital flight and emigrations out of Hong Kong persist. Year-to-date Singapore is the strongest performing country, undoubtedly in part a net beneficiary of Hong Kong's woes, while Australia remains the worst performing country.

The quarter was characterised by a reiterative pivot between risk-on and risk-off sentiments that fortuitously ended with positive performance. Real interest rates remain low (or negative) under the gravity of record economic stimulus, in turn monetizing equities, incrementally sustaining livelihoods and keeping consumption afloat. The gradual re-opening of economies is constructive, while observers counterbalance this with the ever-present possibility of 'second wave' resurgences, accompanied by requisite lockdown measures, which have already transpired in select locations globally. Despite current progress towards a viable vaccine being well received, the pandemic has unraveled a universal tapestry of socio-economic fragilities and inequalities. Likewise, in instances it will permanently alter the way we will interact, live and work when returning to a 'new' normal.

As investors grapple with a confluence of factors, including the pandemic's economic disruption and the unprecedented economic stimulus response, US-China relations, election politics, Brexit etc. volatility and uncertainty will reign supreme. Our preference is to remain positioned in stocks and sectors that are benefiting from structural tailwinds and avoid those that are encountering structural headwinds, caveated by appropriate pricing. The current crisis in our view has reinforced and accelerated pre-existing structural trends, whereby we maintain our conviction. It has stress tested countries and their varying economic policy responses worldwide. Dislocations in stock markets will arise as investors proact and react to macro-political flux. The outcome will be mispricing for certain stocks and sectors as performance divergence remains vast with further changes over time, introducing additional dimensions to stock and sector selection and opportunities for astute active managers. Those with robust investment processes and investment philosophies will have a solid foundation and platform to identify and capitalize on opportunities as they arise. At Catalyst Fund Managers, we will continue to navigate the new normal and endeavor to deliver attractive risk-adjusted property returns for our clients in a disciplined and clinical manner.
