MONTHLY COMMENTARY

The fund benchmark, the FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed Rental Net Total Return Index, recorded a net total USD return of 12.73% for the month of November. The best performing listed real estate market was Australia which recorded a total USD return of 25.42% for the month. Singapore recorded the lowest total USD return of 9.77%.

The best performing real estate sectors for the month were European Hotels (73.12%), European Malls (67.59%) and US Hotels (47.49%). The worst performing sectors were US Data Centres (-5.56%), North America Storage (-2.49%), and Asian Data Centres (-1.12%).

In an unusual year with extreme market volatility November 2020 stands out as one of the most extreme months on record. We received the US presidential election results, but market news and share price performances were dominated by news of highly effective vaccines for the coronavirus. Market sentiment improved drastically and turned full risk-on as investors started seeing light at the end of the coronavirus tunnel. The high efficacy of the vaccines removes for many the tail risk of a lingering pandemic that continues to plague the economic recovery. Consensus economic forecasts have been revised upwards with many expecting a faster "V" shaped recovery to take shape, with the economy recovering losses and output at the end of 2021 back at 2019 year-end level.

Since the vaccine news broke, a general rotation has occurred out of securities that has outperformed since the start of the pandemic into those that have underperformed. In the real estate sector this parallel has also played out. Sectors that have underperformed this year like hotels, retail, and office were some of the strongest performing sectors of the month.

The estimated forward FAD (Funds Available for Distribution) yield for the sector is 4.59%. Relative to corporate bonds the sector looks attractively priced on both implied cap rates and expected total return spreads. Within the real estate universe, more attractively priced opportunities exist in specific real estate sectors and stocks, providing opportunities for astute active managers. exist in specific real estate sectors and stocks, providing opportunities for astute active managers.
